

The recent consultation held by Saxon Weald with the plans for the Britons Croft site had 76 people attend and the general sense was that people are very positive about the proposals. They will be collating the feedback from people and reassessing the comments as they are sent in.

In terms of next steps, Saxon Weald will be collating the feedback and making any changes to the plans they feel are necessary based on that feedback. They are hopeful they will be able to submit the full planning application in January, once all survey information has been received.
