As data is emerging about the disproportionate effect of Covid-19 for our minority communities, a Sussex wide programme has been created, with the aims to;

- better understand the experiences and challenges faced by local minority communities during Covid-19 and
- use that information to inform and challenge our services to better support and protect you during the pandemic and beyond

In order to make a positive impact on our minority communities, we need to understand peoples experiences of health care services within the last two years, how the pandemic has affected people individually and in their household, and consider best ways to support individuals and their community as we learn to live with Covid-19.

We have co-designed a survey with Trust of Developing Communities and partners and have published it on our new interactive website;<https://yoursaysussexhealthandcare.uk.engagementhq.com/sussex-covid-19-bame-disparity-response-programme> .

Please feel free to share our survey with your contacts. The survey will close on Monday 24 August and the responses will be included in a final report drawing in experiences from people across Sussex with a set of recommendations to have a positive impact on health inequalities.

If you require the survey in an alternative language please email esxccg.contactus-eastsussexccg@nhs.net FAO Antonia Bennett.
